in a new version from the 20th century, was the first "Churfürstliche Hofservice" of the Nymphenburg Manufactory at the Wittelsbach Court, painted by Joseph Zächenberger in 1765 with festive bouquets of flowers, butterflies and insects. At the end of the 18th century, it was replaced as a court service by the "Bavarian Court Service" by Dominikus Auliczek. It experienced its renaissance in 1913, when the service was again commissioned as an extensive dinner service for the wedding of Ernst August, Duke of Brunswick and Lüneburg, son of the last Duke of Cumberland, with Victoria Luise, daughter of the last German Emperor William II.
